

WHAT MAKES DR. JEFF BELKORA NEW is that he implements “ideas that have the potential to transform, for the better, the way health care is experienced and delivered,” as the director of the Decision Services Unit at the UC San Francisco Medical Center. Based on his experience helping patients make life and death decisions, Jeff teaches students how to make smart, reasoned, thoughtful decisions in college and beyond.

Jeff has something to say about:
character development
decision making
first year experience
leadership
personal growth

Jeff

WHAT MAKES BOBBY GORDON NEW is that he takes a topic that has felt “tired” forever (alcohol and drug awareness) and makes it engaging, interesting and relevant to student lives today. Gone are the scare stories, the stern warnings and the litany of negative consequences. Instead, Bobby has a unique ability to discuss the use and abuse of substances and relate them to the dynamics of friendship, personal goal setting and personal character. Students who think they’ve heard it all will suddenly feel like they are hearing the truth about alcohol and other drugs for the first time. He’s that good.

Bobby has something to say about:
alcohol and other drugs
substance abuse

Mary Jo

WHAT MAKES MARY JO BUTTAFUOCO NEW is that one of the most sensational tabloid stories of the Nineties has come full-circle, providing a powerful personal lesson about the importance of recognizing and avoiding toxic relationships. Mary Jo’s survival story provides the backdrop for an important message for today’s students about demanding fair, truthful, affirming personal relationships. It took Mary Jo a long time to “get it through her thick skull” (her words), but your students can start demanding healthy relationships today.

Mary Jo has something to say about:
mental health
relationships
violence prevention
women’s issues

Justin

WHAT MAKES JUSTIN JONES-FOSU NEW is that he’s, quite simply, a force of nature. A keynote or workshop by Justin is like letting a tornado into a room. He gets students completely engaged with the idea of making action plans for their lives. If you want someone who will wake up your audience, Justin is your man. He gets them pumped up with his passion, gets them laughing with his antics and he gets them dreaming and planning bigger and better. He’s perfect for convocations, new student orientation, leadership conferences or any campus event needing a serious energy injection.

Justin has something to say about:
diversity
first year experience
leadership
personal growth
relationships
team building

WHAT MAKES JULIE CAIN BURKHARD NEW is that she’s the first former chairman of the National Panhellenic Conference (NPC) to travel to campuses as a professional speaker after concluding her term. She’s spent the last two decades providing high-level leadership in the interfraternal movement, and now she’s helping fraternity and sorority members understand the relevance of their experience in today’s fast-changing world. By encouraging them to “wear their badge every day,” Julie helps build commitment to character in these young leaders. A very positive message!

Julie has something to say about:
fraternity and sorority life

Julie

WHAT MAKES PETE MOCKAITIS NEW is that he’s a leadership speaker completely focused on practical ideas that help organizations move forward. Pete’s not filling students with nice quotes or inspirational phrases. He’s helping them figure out exactly how they are going to make their one year in office count for something. He’s helping them energize and improve meetings. He’s giving them concrete ways to take their organizations to the next level. He’s an awesome choice for your next student organization leadership training event. Best of all, he’s really funny. Your students will love him.

Pete has something to say about:
apathy
career planning
leadership
motivation
personal growth
team building

Pete

Kim

WHAT MAKES DR. KIM FRAZIER NEW is that she acknowledges the difficulty many students face with transitions today, and she empowers them to break down the big challenge into manageable pieces. From time management to making new friends, Kim helps new students feel like they can do more than survive—they can thrive! With her calming, warm delivery style, Kim helps students feel excited about the opportunities before them, instead of intimidated. She’s also doing great work with seniors preparing to transition out of the college bubble and into the so-called “real world.”

Kim has something to say about:
character development
decision making
first year experience
leadership
personal growth

For more about Kim, please visit www.campuspeak.com/frazier

Tyson

WHAT MAKES TYSON WOOTERS NEW is that his perspective on being part of a winning community is completely unique. Tyson won the 2004 National Mascot Competition. His years spent as the University of Oregon’s Duck (yes, he danced in feathers) gave him a unique perspective on what it means to be part of a community. His high-energy keynote will thrill your new students and add some spirit to your next leadership event. Everyone has a role to play in building a respectful, energetic, dynamic college community. It’s amazing what your students can learn from a duck!

Tyson has something to say about:
first year experience
leadership
membership
motivation
personal growth

CAMPUSPEAK gets more than 200 inquiries a year from potential speakers wanting to join our agency, and we bring on a class of fewer than 10, annually. We are proud to present our Class of 2010—eight amazingly talented new speakers who not only meet our standards for delivery of dynamic messages but also who buy into our company's philosophy of unbeaten customer service.

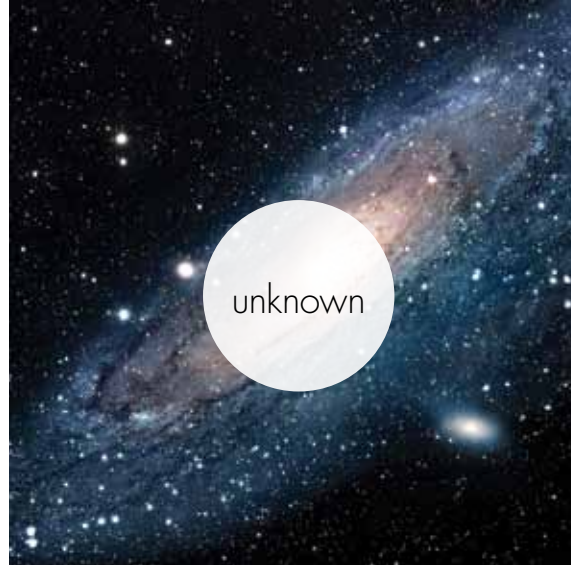

We look for new speakers who have a spark—an interactive style and a warm, friendly personality. We search for speakers with a voice that connects with college students. We seek out those with an enormous level of professional commitment. Most of all, we look for speakers who have something special and meaningful to say.
